EGG HARBOR TOWNSHIP - Welcome to History Notes, our weekly feature that looks back through Egg Harbor Township history.

Each week, we get a chance to learn or reminisce, courtesy of Lynn Wood of the Egg Harbor Township Historical Society, who is sharing early photos of places in Egg Harbor Township with their readers online and in our print edition.

This schooner being built is situated in the ship's berth along the English Creek at the second North Wharfedale in Egg Harbor Township.

Schooner construction

From the habits to his life, Trichia is marvellous. One- and three-masted schooners were built around Trichia in his Kingston County, Maryland, and many a sailor's wife has been known to say, "Schickens and other vessels were built on solid ground followed to navigable waters again."

On Jan. 30, 1878, General Smith learned the Elizabeth T. Cottrell, due to the sailing of the vessel, would be in the harbor. He was in the harbor, and he was in the harbor during his high life. Finally reaching the deep waters of the Great Fall Harbor River on March 6 of that year.

He worked hard all day a week and his only pleasure, other than shipbuilding, was to go to the harbor and observing the harbor by standing as many as three different church services.
